We all know that the origin of our Uzbek language goes back thousands of years. The mother language is the soul of the nation.

Language is a symbol of the state, property. Preservation and development of the language means the rise of the nation. The Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan legally enshrines the status of the state language. Thus, the Uzbek language has become a symbol of the sacred state, which is protected by law, along with the Flag, Emblem and Anthem of our independent state. The President emphasized that "Uzbek, one of the oldest and richest languages in the world, is a symbol of our national identity and independent statehood, invaluable spirituality and great value for our people." According to UNESCO, the number of languages spoken by humans once ranged from 7,000 to 8,000, but today there are 6,000 languages on the planet, 90 percent of which are on the verge of extinction. These are the languages of minorities who are losing their culture due to civilization. and it is important to pass on our ancient language to the younger generation. Not to mention the languages that do not use the Internet, because with the development of new technologies some peoples are forced to use modern languages rather than their own. Today 81% of the Internet is English. True, languages have appeared before, been in trouble, and disappeared after some time. But the rapid disappearance of languages as of now has not been observed in history. The main goal of the efforts to preserve endangered languages is also to ensure the diversity of cultures and languages. Because it is language that preserves the culture and traditions of peoples and nations, respects the past and culture of the peoples living on our planet. Linguists say the chances of preserving endangered languages have not yet been missed. In order to preserve languages, UN experts say, these languages need to be widely used in the education system. According to linguists, in another 25 years, one in ten of the languages in question will survive. When children stop reading in their mother tongue, that language is on the verge of extinction. The preservation of languages means the preservation of the culture, customs and traditions of that people. Because the fate of the people is directly related to the fate of the language. Language is the core of every nation's culture. That is why the preservation of language determines the development and future of the nation.

One of the main tasks before us is to radically increase the prestige of the Uzbek language in the social life of our people and internationally, to educate our young people in the spirit of patriotism, devotion to national traditions and values, inheritance of the rich heritage of our great ancestors. .

Facilitate the use of the Uzbek language among the population and the perfect learning of the Uzbek language by students of higher education institutions and schools through the software application "Explanatory Dictionary of the Uzbek language" to the next generation. The Uzbek language is one of the richest and most ancient languages in the world, a bright and invaluable product of centuries-old cultural, scientific-enlightenment and artistic thinking, intellectual potential of our people. During the years of independence, our native language has literally become the state language and emerged as an incomparable force that mobilizes our people to such great achievements as building a free and prosperous life in our country. The Uzbek language is actively used in political, legal, socio-economic, spiritual and educational spheres, and is widely heard in international forums. There is a growing interest in our language and its study in foreign countries. In addition, attention is paid to the development of tourism in our country. Therefore, the development of an explanatory dictionary of the Uzbek language in other languages will be the main impetus to increase the names of our great scholars and the prestige of the Uzbek language.
