IELTS has been developed by some of the world's leading language assessment experts and will test the full range of English skills needed for success in your new job or study placement abroad.

There are two IELTS test modules available - the Academic Module and the General Training Module. The results of the Academic Module may be used to determine a candidate's suitability for study at undergraduate or postgraduate level.

IELTS General Training - measures English language proficiency in a practical, everyday context. The tasks and tests reflect both workplace and social situations.

Main part

IELTS is a test of all four language skills: Listening, Reading, Writing and Speaking.

You should also realize that General English Course practice is useful in addition to a specialized IELTS Course. It is the test for professionals – professional registration bodies in many fields will accept an IELTS result, including accounting, engineering, law, medicine, nursing, pharmacy and teaching bodies in many countries. This means that after completing your studies, you may need to take the test in order to gain professional registration in an English-speaking country. It is the test for migration – IELTS scores are required by governments in more countries than any other English language test as a requirement for permanent residency. Unlike other providers, the IELTS General Training test is the only non-academic test available for migration to Australia, New Zealand, Canada, The United Kingdom and The USA.

need to prepare very strongly for the IELTS exam. This exam is different from other exams and its rules are also a bit complicated. And there is the golden rule of the IELTS. The golden rule of the IELTS is "Always give the monkey exactly what he wants". If a monkey asks for a banana, you must give him a banana and not an apple. In other words, your answer to a question must be exactly what is required. You must be quite sure of the type of information you are asked to give as an answer, and what you must do with that information to give an accurate answer.

In the IELTS test, Grammar is awarded a separate band score in both the Speaking and Writing modules. You are assessed on your ability to use correct and appropriate grammar and on the range of sentence types that you produce. Even simple sentences need to be written accurately but in order to raise your score above Band 4, you also need to be able to show that you can use some complex sentence types and have an understanding of the relevant tenses and structures. Good grammar is essential for taking the IELTS exam. Grammar is not tested directly in this exam, so you might be surprised to hear this. Even though there is no part of the IELTS that focuses only on grammar, you will need to study grammar to get on the path to exam success. Grammar helps you make progress in all the four skills, reading, writing, listening and speaking. You'll be able to feel your progress in speaking and writing mainly, because this is where you will actively use grammar structures to express your ideas. However, knowing grammar will also help you understand language, both in reading and in listening, because you'll become more familiar with grammar structures and will understand what others want to say right away. The best way to improve your grammar is to study each rule one by one, read some examples, make your own examples and then practice each rule by doing exercises. Another most important part of IELTS is vocabulary. Vocabulary is a very important part of the IELTS. It's also important to understand that each section of the IELTS requires different vocabulary. Vocabulary is an integral part of IELTS. Because vocabulary is very important for all IELTS skills. To get a high score from reading, listening, speaking and writing, you must first have vocabulary. Correlation analysis showed that dictionary depth IELTS is more important than breadth in terms of improving academic reading scores. This shows a deep development of possible vocabulary neglected by many students and teachers, more attention needs to be paid.

Conclusion

The regression analysis determined the vocabulary threshold level of 6,000 word families. Therefore, it is recommended to help teachers to improve students' reading comprehension students develop their vocabulary until they reach maturity the phrase consists of 6,000 word sets. Once this level is reached, teachers are needed then focus more on developing students' other skills, such as test-taking strategies and grammar.
