Introduction

As the XXIst century is the age of information technology, we are all focusing on our phones today. Even a newborn baby calms down when we hear the phone ring or put it next to us. What do you think is the reason for this?

In the East, the mother is the main breadwinner in the family. Leading figures and scholars of Oriental literature have also expressed their views on this issue. Ibn Sin expressed his valuable views on child rearing and methods of upbringing. Ibn Sina also mentions the issues of housekeeping in his views on the moral upbringing of the child. A parent who is able to correct his or her own shortcomings can be an educator. The most important means of moral education is to talk to the child one-on-one and to advise the child without touching his or her feelings or pride.

Berdakh emphasizes the important role of the family in the upbringing of children, saying that good results in the upbringing of children can be achieved only if there is mutual respect between parents and children in the family environment. According to Berdakh, a person needs upbringing from birth, and his first educators are, of course, parents. According to Berdakh, society will prosper if all people are humane and just. To do this, it is necessary to educate the people, to cultivate in them a positive attitude.

Mirzo Ulugbek expressed the following views on improving the family environment and healthy upbringing. The environment in which a child is brought up, that is, the family, plays an important role in the child's interest in learning and the development of his mood. He emphasizes that parents should be educated in the family, and that it is most effective for the child to witness that the parents themselves are role models and role models in upbringing.

Jaloliddin Davoni compares parents to the mainstay in the family and child rearing. According to him, the equal participation of both father and mother in the upbringing of the family helps the child to acquire good manners, a certain profession, food, clothing, which is the material basis of science and profession. , emphasizes that parents should be equally active in delivering the necessary items and equipment.

Discussion

Parents should be the first role models and leaders in the family in the student's education. The world of the child begins in the family. And the habit of reading first appears in the family. A good book in the hands of parents and their children is a good sign for a reading environment and spiritual unity to prevail in this family. For this, both parents should be friends with the book.

Family reading is especially important for a child's reading life. Listening to an adult read, watching pictures of a book with him, thinking actively about the child, caring about the heroes, waiting for the events to continue, distinguishing the connections between their own experience and the experience of others and connecting them to each other learns. Reading together brings parents and children closer to each other, encourages and fills unique and joyful moments of spiritual communication, fosters in the child a full attitude of kindness and contentment, as well as a kind heart.

Family reading traditions are a very important part of the family education system. Don't think that reading a book together as a family is outdated, because a tablet, TV, computer and other sources of information do not give the same pleasure and impression as reading a book together.

Family reading is not a method of receiving information, it is the most important and most effective method of communication, a method of upbringing that is rich in strong influence and emotion, motivation. Parents help to arouse children's interest in reading and learning through family reading.

The good thing about a teacher working with parents is that the child only learns what they have learned in school for 45 minutes

Only 10 minutes of knowledge is repeated at home and memorized.

The main events in the child's memory are what happened at home. Maybe that's why the importance of a book that you teach at home with your parents or read with your parents is stronger and more influential for them. Today, our goal in pedagogical practice is to educate and nurture the child through the interaction of children and parents through lessons and family work.

One of the features of the various activities that are carried out is that the children perform together with their parents. For example, in European preschools and primary education, there is a special "Father's Day", which is attended by the father of all students in the class. This is as follows:

- for parents to better understand their children;
- family reunification through reading works of art;
- allows you to work individually with each child and his family

An effective means of educating and nurturing children of preschool and primary school age is to help parents understand the value of children's education as a guarantee of their success in life, as an intellectual resource for the development of their personality.

Conclusion

Strengthening cooperation with parents to promote and develop children's learning in the family, involving every parent in solving problems of children's learning and development depends on the skills of the teacher. Helping to develop interest in books and works, the formation of the ability to listen and understand different works are passed from parent to child. The child is the mirror of the family, of the parents.

Our educators, who are today's educators and leaders, must be able to explain to the student what kind of parenting etiquette, what are the duties of parents and children in the family. It is important to explain once again that it is up to parents to develop students' creativity, independent thinking, goal setting and planning skills. If teachers work with parents to set goals such as generalizing and improving family experiences, we will also be able to combat the degrading upbringing of young people that has become a big problem today!
