Introduction

In Nigeria, both small and medium scale businesses exist alongside with each other, respecting government order and directives through collective bargaining. A densely populated state or country is an eye of investors. A Favourable business climate is a road map to business success. It gives room for effective business growth and development. Compatibility of most businesses with government legislations is observed when an erudite economist and astute leaders are in power controlling resources. The rise and fall of a nation is dependent of the leadership machinery of that state or country. In Nigeria, more than 96% of people are business men. In this dispensation, educated men and women have come to join production or manufacturing businesses in Nigeria, because it is a lucrative business whether small or large scale business. No human being wants to be idle. Small and medium scale businesses are strong pressures groups that have outstanding remarks for nation's development in both Nigeria and in the whole world (Oluwunmi, 2022). In Nigeria, some small and medium scale businesses have rose to large scale businesses. They include: Soap making, can drinks, grains, beer production, noodles, cereals, textile, pharmaceutical, and health treatment businesses among others. Vast majority of large scale businesses are sources of human sustenance. Some people are into large scale businesses to produce physical or tangible goods, while some people engage in large scale service businesses for human consumption and earning a living. Those large scale service businesses include: School business, transportation, medical services, legal services, hotel services among others. Activities of large scale businesses that are into production of tangible goods and services are felt by people that are in need of the products or services of those large scale business organizations. Management of any large scale business requires professional expertise on planning, organizing, directing, coordinating and controlling men and materials for realization of predetermined goals of establishing the large scale business. Management of large scale business hinges on mutual collective bargaining that cut across government, investors and leaders of communities where the large scale businesses established. Poor business deal between government and investors, dovetails to unsafe business climate. This transcends to relocation of large scale businesses to another state or country (Boyce, 2022). Most functional large scale businesses in Nigeria especially, in Imo state are sources of economic generations (Agwu, 2022). Vast majority of large scale businesses are settled or sited in both urban and rural villages in Imo state and the entire states in Nigeria. A good number of large scale businesses in Nigeria do not only involve their workers on training or mastery of large scale business skills, but to a high extent, training of future industrial giants that starts from small to medium up to large scale businesses in Nigeria (Dantata, 2023). It is clear to understand that large scale businesses are the highest in employers of labour both skilled and unskilled labourers in Nigeria and in the whole world. Chronic unemployment exacerbated by state and federal government inability to employ significant number of graduates from tertiary institutions in Nigeria, is controlled by employability of graduates by large scale businesses in Nigeria thus, helping to boost Nigerian economy. Some large scale businesses are owned by the government, while majority are owned and financed by the public individuals that owned them. Majority of large scale businesses can be managed by any human gender for the fact that the needed skills are used. Some large scale businesses are seasonal, while some operate at any season. In Nigeria, there are internal and external factors that constitute threats to large scale businesses in Nigeria and in the whole world. Some of those internal constraints include: Staff taking order from more than one superior due to power tussle among leaders in large scale business environment, role conflicts, faulty machines, gossips, inadequate team building or team relationship (Hofstede, 1980, Robbins, 1989, Mullins, 2000 & Christian, 2025). External factors that constitute threats to businesses include: Insecurity, inadequate raw materials, inadequate skilled manpower, difference currency, language difference, inadequate collateral securities for borrowing funds and harsh government legislations on businesses in Nigeria.

Large Scale Businesses in Nigeria

Large scale businesses are businesses that deal on large scale production of tangible goods and delivery of services. Large scale businesses exist in both Nigeria and in the whole world. Majority of large scale businesses deals on whole sale services to their customers, while some deal on retail services to their customers. However, operation of large scale businesses either on large scale or small scale businesses depends on the social demands of the goods they produce. Decision are mostly taken by large scale business managers to produce and supply goods on large or on retail means are based on financial and buying habits of their customers. customers proximity, buying habits of people in the area where the business are situated and mostly, by large scale organizations decisions to bring their services closer to their customers (Albanese, 1998). Benefits derived from establishing large scale businesses in Nigeria are enormous and rewarding. Taxes and other revenues generated from large scale businesses are used for provision and rehabilitation of new and old social amenities in Nigeria. However, foreign large scale businesses in Nigeria, generates incomes that add more values to the economy of Diasporas countries in the world. Most indigenous large scale businesses in Nigeria have transcended into international businesses thus, boosting the economy of Nigeria and the country where their products or services are sold and consumed.

Favourable Climate on Large Scale Businesses

Large scale businesses are sources of manpower training of people in various capacities in the whole world especially in Nigeria. Large scale businesses survives in states and countries where there are availability of labour, raw materials, faire government legislations, favourable tax charges, good security networks, reliable customers, new markets and reliable weather conditions.

Unfavourable Businesses Climate on Large Scale Businesses in Nigeria

It is ideal for a country to enact policies that will control the operation of businesses in a country whether small or large scale business (Oluwunumi, 2022). It is imperative that large scale businesses should collaborate or synergize with government in obedience to the policies provided by the government of a country where they are situated through collective negotiations structures established between the government and large scale business operators. It is very alarming that most renowned large scale business outfits have left Nigeria, while some have abandoned their businesses to fallow due to high cost of importing raw materials, inadequate customers, competitions, human negative perceptions, and above all, large volume of tax demanded by government, including harassment, maiming and destructions of properties of large scale businesses using power of dis-strain (Akinyili, 2020, Adideran, 2022). Fear of investors on government use of power of dis-strain has caused both new and old investors to leave Nigerian shores especially, in Imo state to areas where those investors felt their businesses will survive. These have caused significant set backs on Imo state economy and Nigeria in general. Other issues that possess significant threats to large scale businesses include: High charges on hiring skilled and unskilled labouers, bad road networks, unfavourable weather conditions and unavailability of new markets (Bredino, Fiderkumo,& Adesina, 2018).

Significant Backdrops on Large Scale businesses in Nigeria

In Nigeria, many foreign businesses have left Nigeria shores majorly, on high tax charges, cost of importation of raw materials, insecurity and unavailability of consumers. In the same vein, many indigenous businesses in Nigeria have also, left Nigerian shores to countries where there goods and services will be highly patronized thus, causing jeopardy or uproarious situation to Nigerian economy.

Unfavourable business environment has caused exodus of Nigerian professionals to more rewarding places abroad. Nigerian Professionals that have left Nigerian shores are found in the following sectors. They include: Engineering, accounting, media and health sector (Christian, 2024 & Christian 2025). These have raised significant blows on Nigerian economy thus, causing sudden human deaths due to no medical experts, brain drain in educational sectors due to inadequate educational administrative experts, lecturers and teachers in educational sector. Also, inadequate practicing specialists in agriculture have been observed as significant causes of scarcity of foods in Nigeria. Unprecedented movement of experts out of Nigerian shores for search of more rewarding jobs abroad have caused significant set-backs to Nigerian economy (Ademola, 2022).

Insecurity

Insecurity is majorly a strong set back protracting large scale businesses in Nigeria. Insecurity has caused directors, managers and senior and junior staff of large scale businesses in Imo state into palpable fears, because of the fears of being kidnapped, maimed or killed. Most large scale business organizations in Imo state are financially exploited on un-official taxes from hoodlums on daily basis. In the same vein, fears of being killed with gun have caused some large scale businesses to seek better business environments where they will carry out their businesses without being killed, exploited or molested. No business can thrive in a dreadful environment. Persistent sounds of guns, news about people that are killed in a gun battle have scared majority of investors from engaging into business in Imo state and the South East part of Nigeria. Persistent insecurity in Imo state has resulted to settlement of various disputes including land disputes out of court, especially in the hands of hoodlums.

Special luck down in Imo state and the entire eastern part of Nigeria have caused clamp down on sales of large business products. Sometimes, drivers conveying finished products are confronted maimed or killed at a spot. On several occasions, vehicles conveying goods to urban cities and villages in Imo state are burnt into ashes. These uproarious situations have caused retrogressions and cramp down on most large scale businesses in Imo state thus, retarding new and old investors from establishing or operating large scale businesses in Imo state. In some cases, when vehicles of some large scale businesses break down, the goods they are conveying are stolen, sometimes, huge taxes are demanded from drivers conveying goods to wholesale and retail shops for personal selfish use without government awareness.

The essence of tax demands or collection is to attract more economic growth and development in countries or state where they are demanded. Inability of tax collectors to remit the collected taxes to government coffers, proliferated tax collectors, and tax over demand, have caused hitches on large businesses operating in Imo state. These have thus caused owners of large scale businesses to pay from their noses or have their business premises seized by Imo state government when official taxes are demanded. Insecurity causes clamp down of organizations especially educational institutions (Christian, 2023). Vagaries of miss-march on tax collection have caused vast majority of large scale businesses to relocate to neighbouring state or countries in some part of the world thus, causing huge set backs on Imo state economy and Nigeria in general.

Methods

Test of Scores

The mean scores of the above analysis are: 2.60, 2.70, 2.80 and 2.90. However, the scores were above 2.5 of decision rule. The findings from the analysis revealed that the causes of unpalatable business environment in Imo state are significant. They effects include: Strict government legislations, non-reliable customers, high tax charges, insecurity, high cost of importation of raw materials among others. These effects are reasons why some large scale business relocate their businesses to neighbouring states and outside countries of the world.

Discussion of Findings

Small and medium scale businesses are strong pressures groups that have outstanding remarks for development nations in both Nigeria and in the whole world (Oluwunmi, 2022). The findings of this study revealed that large scale businesses do not survive in states and countries where there are unavailability of labour, raw materials, unfair government legislations, high tax charges, insecurity, poor networks, unreliable customers, unavailability of new markets and unreliable weather conditions.

(Bredino, Fiderkumo,& Adesina, 2018), state that significant threats to large scale businesses include: High charges on hiring skilled and unskilled labourers, bad road networks, unfavourable weather conditions and unavailability of favourable new markets.

(Akinyili, 2020, Adideran, 2022), adduced that high cost of importing raw materials, inadequate customers, competitions, human negative perceptions, and above all, large volume of tax demanded by government, including harassment, maiming and destructions of properties of large scale businesses using power of dis-strain constitute set-backs and a second thought to large scale businesses in Nigeria.

(Boyce, 2022), encapsulated that poor bargaining or negotiations between government and investors results to unsafe business climate to large scale businesses. This has transcended to relocation of large scale businesses to another state or countries of the world

(Christian 2024 & Christian, 2025), opined that unfavourable business environment has caused exodus of Nigerian professionals to more rewarding places abroad. Nigerian professional that have left Nigerian shores are found in the following sectors. They include: Engineering, accounting, media and health sector. These have raised significant blows on Nigerian economy thus, causing sudden human deaths due to no medical experts, brain drain in educational sectors due to inadequate educational administrative experts, lecturers and teachers in educational sector. (Ademola, 2022) averred that unprecedented movement of Nigerian professional have caused significant set backs on Nigerian economy.

Recommendations

1. Imo state government should beef up with security enforcement. These would reduce, killing, maiming and kidnapping in Imo state thus, attracting more investors who would raise the economy of Imo state to great expectations.
2. Effective tax management practices should be enforced in Imo state. These would reduce over taxing and non-remittance of some taxes collected to Imo state government coffers.

3. Imo state government should conduct re-orientation to large scale business owners. These would reduce persistent run out of large scale business owners in Imo state and assuring most large scale businesses in Imo state of continued government protection by Imo state government.

Conclusion

Most businesses weather small, medium or large scale businesses generate economic growth and development to a country or state where they are situated or established. It is worrisome that some large scale businesses in Imo state are retrogressing and relocating to safer business areas mostly, out of Imo state due to persistent growth of insecurity in Imo state. Insecurity has retarded the desires of old and new investors to continue setting up there industries in Imo state as some investors are kidnapped, maimed and killed on different occasions.

However, exorbitant tax charges on large scale businesses in Imo state has caused most large scale businesses to relocate to neighbouring states and countries that have a good tax management system (Zohry, 2022). Also, lack of reliable customers, cultural differences and poor weather conditions have retarded the operation of most large scale businesses in Imo state and Nigeria in general.
